

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence

SUBJECT : Reassignment of Comptroller Functions

1. This memorandum proposes reassignment of responsibilities and authorities now vested in the Comptroller. Approval action by the Director of Central Intelligence is recommended in paragraph 4.

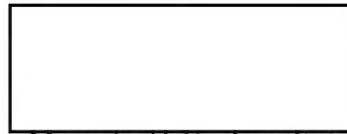

2. The Agency's expanded responsibilities and its complex operating relationships make it increasingly necessary that management policies be coordinated and controlled at the highest practicable level in the command structure. This is particularly true with respect to budgetary policy, program review, and the allocation of manpower and financial resources. Historically the Comptroller has been responsible for management of the budget, for development of financial policy, and for day-to-day fiscal and accounting operations in support of Agency activities. I question however, as a practical matter, whether a Comptroller can be expected to deal authoritatively with the competing demands of major components and make--and enforce--the necessary hard decisions. I question too whether it is necessary or desirable to combine under one head the management policy and control functions plus the responsibility for day-to-day operations. The determination of management policy and the exercise of controls must, I believe, be functions of command, supported by staff assistance. The execution of policy decisions should take place through the Agency's operating mechanisms. In other words, I believe the time has come to reorganize the functions of the Comptroller to accord more realistically with the present-day facts of Agency life, and the reassignment of the present Comptroller affords a practical occasion on which to do it.

3. I suggest that the Comptroller policy and control functions should be assigned to the Executive Director. He exercises broad directive and approval authority under existing delegations and to assign to him responsibility for budgetary and financial policy, with the review and control functions pertaining thereto, would be a logical development of his role.

Robert Joseph

He would be supported by a Budget Division, a Manpower Control Staff, and a Program Analysis Staff. I suggest further that fiscal and accounting operations throughout the Agency structure constitute a major element of support and as such should be assigned to the Deputy Director for Support.

4. If you approve these proposals, I recommend that you sign the attached Notice which will put them into effect.

THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

The Executive Director is the senior non-statutory officer of the Agency and acts for or in the absence of the Director and the Deputy Director in exercising his directive and approval authority. He coordinates component activities and ensures necessary action by the proper component on decisions of the Director and the Deputy Director. He develops budgetary and financial policies of the Agency and is responsible for program evaluation, financial analysis, manpower controls, and the preparation and execution of the Agency budget. He assures that all components are kept advised of policy decisions or intra-governmental actions affecting them, and he reviews all papers requiring action by the Director or Deputy Director.
